Healthcare providers rely on David for representation on a broad range of healthcare legal issues from business start-ups to day to day operations to mergers and acquisitions. His clients appreciate his extensive background, perspective, and experience in representing hospitals, physicians, surgery centers, imaging centers, urgent care centers, behavioral health providers, home health agencies, and other providers because his knowledge base gives him a head start in understanding their business goals and objectives.

Few healthcare transactions are simple, and David's ability to navigate healthcare complexities make him a valuable resource. Identifying barriers and impediments is not enough—finding innovative and creative solutions is the true value proposition for a health care attorney.

David has served as outside general counsel for a large hospital system and represents some of the most successful and innovative health systems in Florida. His clients range from solo medical practices to large regional health care systems and everything in between. A graduate of Duke University and the University of Virginia School of Law, David is Board Certified as a specialist in Health Care Law by The Florida Bar.
