Tampa, FL

Tel: (813) 252-7985

Jordan focuses her practice on intellectual property, litigation and legal writing. She works with individuals and businesses to help protect their ideas and navigate legal challenges, drawing on experience gained through hands-on work with entrepreneurs and inventors.

Jordan received her J.D. from Penn State Dickinson Law School and gained hands-on experience representing clients in Penn State Law's Intellectual Property Clinic, where she advised entrepreneurs and assisted in drafting patent applications. She also distinguished herself as an advocate, earning recognition in Penn State Law's 1L Mock Trial Competition as Best Preliminary Round Advocate and Best Overall Semi-Final Advocate. Jordan also served as a Comments Editor for Penn State Law Review, refining her legal writing and editorial skills. Jordan was an active member of the law school community, founding the Health Law and Policy Society and contributing to several student organizations. She brings a strong foundation in intellectual property, litigation, and legal writing.

In her spare time, Jordan enjoys watching SEC football, raising awareness for invisible disabilities and exploring ice cream shops as a self-proclaimed ice cream connoisseur.
